Investigative Psychology and Understanding Offenders' Modus Operandi

Relatrice

Dr Donna Youngs, psicologa investigativa

She is a chartered forensic psychologist. She was until recently the associate director of the International Research Centre for Investigative Psychology, an academic centre focused on the ways in which psychology can inform investigations, commonly known as offender profiling, the modelling of psychological styles of violent and sexual offences from stalking through to serial homicide.

She has published over 75 academic publications including six books and lectured to academic and police audiences around the world. She has contributed expert testimony to a number of high-profile legal cases including the reconsideration of the evidence against the Lockerbie bomber. Drawing on her research speciality she has been the expert psychologist on 20 television series including channel 4 Hunted, BBC one's Murder Mystery and My Family, channel 5 Robbie Coltrane's Critical Evidence as well as numerous Netflix and CBS documentary series and one-off documentaries most recently ITVs re-examination of the murder of Jill Dando.

The research methodologies and theories of human behaviour she drew on to model these patterns of destructive criminal actions are now being applied to the modelling of people's life narratives and Human Kindness.
